

Hello ,

It is that time of the year again when many of us tend to take stock of our lives. 2015 is gone and a New Year has begun. There is no better time than now, to surround ourselves with those things that will put a spring in our steps as we launch into the early days of 2016. Whatever we do, whoever we are, we all need inspiration.

www.lorettareveals.org is the space you need to be. It is the one space where inspiring stories of different people from all walks of life make one realize that nothing is impossible. We are often privy only to the final outcome of the many years of hard work, dedication and focus of successful men and women. We forget that these "finished products" started out as raw materials just like every one of us. They often passed through the refining high temperature furnace that is life before becoming the refined, finished products that we all see. We do not see how many times they 'fell' or 'failed' and how many 'flops' and 'losses' happened along the way. Lorettareveals.org brings the determination, the focus and hard work of these individuals to the fore - it is the platform that exposes the 'iceberg nature of success'.

In the last quarter of 2015, we had the moving story of World famous author and inspirational speaker Ava Brown. She tells us how there is greatness in us all. Charles Ibie greatly inspires with his story of how we can achieve our dreams a step at a time. He tells how he worked hard to become a Nephrologist at Tulane University Medical Center in America against all the odds a migrant would face. You can read the story of how Nigerian born Douglas Emeka Okor accomplished his dream to become a Neurosurgeon in the United Kingdom against all odds despite multiple episodes of rejection.

One of the most powerful inspiring events in the United Kingdom, TedxEuston December 2015 "Vision to Reality" is summarised in two parts under our inspiring events category.

Lancelot Oduwa Imasuen, the prolific Nollywood Director takes us through how tenacity and hard work enabled him navigate the harsh terrain and realities that is film directing behind the red carpet glitz and glamour we all see at the end. From Nollywood, we are transported to the world of science by Emmanuel Adukwu; This Biomedical Scientist tells us how to "keep the end in sight right from the very beginning".

So, back to these first few days of 2016. You see, all the wrongs and failures in the last year count only because of the lessons learnt. We need not wallow in the wrongs and failures themselves. "Fall all we may, we cannot remain fallen!" What is most important is to take the lessons learnt from the past, arrange them like arrows in our quiver of the present and fire them with precision at obstacles that will rare their heads in the future. As we bask in the euphoria of the New Year, remember that it is not the kaleidoscope of multiple resolutions that matters but the ability to set a few firm goals and keep the focus while applying our previous lessons and understanding that even though failure may rare it's head, the final goal is to succeed- there is no abandoning ship because we are set to conquer horizons yet uncharted.

I cannot help thinking how Eric Thomas says it masterfully in his quote "when you want to succeed as bad as you want to breath, then you will be successful." Visit www.lorettareveals.org where transformational revelations you can adapt for life changing success recipes flow. 'Keep your eyes peeled like bananas' on this space in 2016 as you learn and work to become 'the change you want to see'.
