

JUNE 2017 LORETTA REVEALS NEWSLETTER

Welcome to the month of June, the mid-month of the year and in some climes, the birth of summer. The months when the birds intensify their tweeting and the flowers fully blossom. The month when colours come out to play.

In other climes, the rains have come in earnest. Heavenly lines of silver, plummeting the earth and wetting it for the plantation season to flourish. The month of June in all climes heralds Nature's dazzling interplay of colours, and seasonal mystic

May was quite an interesting month on this platform as it brought in its wake, distinct personalities who shared their inspiring and educational stories.

We started off by bringing to you a lady, who succeeded in pushing boundaries in a male dominated industry. A change agent, whose story reveals not only wisdom but also the need to avoid a stereotyping attitude. She made us realise we can do whatever we set our minds to do as far as we do not give up. You do need to meet her.....click on the link below.

Our next story was also very inspiring. It centred on a major crisis in the world today - the housing challenge. This article gave insight to how Africa is rising up to this challenge using recyclable products to bridge the gap in the housing industry. One man and his indefatigable team are taking action, using novel interventions to create multipurpose structures. They are creating practical solutions to the major housing crisis faced in Africa at large and Nigeria in particular. They are doing this by providing low cost sustainable housing in a world moving towards environmental sustainability.

We rounded up the month of May by asking this question below:

"I place a mask on everyday showing I'm alright but am I?" - Joyce Guo

Answers were provided by one of our esteemed guest collaborators, who took us into the world of a scheme that provides a safe haven for those who face abuse of any kind. These abused people can either be male or female.

It is important that we understand how the issue of domestic violence can affect anyone and everyone. This bold team are taking away "masks" and encouraging us all to have our hands on deck, united in the fight to make the world a better place. Do you want to know what lies beneath the "masks"? Then click on the link below.

As always, LR promises to keep providing inspiring mind stimulating articles. So let us sit back and relax as we unfold what June has in stock for you our esteemed readers. It promises to be inspirational, motivating and interesting as always.

June 2017 on our motivational platform is loaded. Look out for the story of one man, who along with his team is encouraging education to flourish in remote areas of the world. Learn how another lady and her team are turning out 'people diamonds' from those society had hitherto stereotyped as unworthy.

You must not miss these and many more as we roll them out. Remember we must never forget to keep moving forward, irrespective of the pace and to continue changing the world for the better in our own small corners.

Once more we say welcome to the month of June and we leave you with this quote below

"I can't change the direction of the wind, but I can adjust my sails to always reach my destination" - Jimmy Dean
